This week we started our official first work cycle. Our Literature lesson was a story from Junior Great Books about a young boy facing a challenge. Before reading the story, we had a discussion about challenging events that we have faced and how we overcame them. The students started working on writing prompts to include in their writer’s notebook. They were asked to write about their favorite childhood toy, and what would happen if they were separated from their friends and got lost in the woods. We are continuing to learn about Google Classroom. This week the students learned how to submit their work online. This program allows them to log into their account at school or home and work on any incomplete work. Our daily class meetings are going well and the students take turns being the facilitator. Our main topic of conversation in our meetings this week was all about the Ropes Course next week. Everyone is excited! It’s been another great week and we look forward to many more.
